

Bio

From Tech to Minimal to Funky Electro and all that is House in between, Teresa strives to fill the masses with an uncontrollable urge to rock to the rhythm of great music that needs to be heard by the oceans of souls dying to hear it.

dj Teresa - the producer

Effective promoting for the Raw Lounge Ladies Night grand opening in October 2007 captured the attention of producer and studio engineer, Vitali Chadrine, a.k.a. Ivan The Terrible. I accepted the invitation to visit his St. Petersburg studio. Within an hour we were both excited about the opportunity to work together and before the next morning the vocal files for my first original track, "Gotta Groove", written and recorded within three fiercely inspired hours, were waiting in his email. Working together in Digital Performer we quickly created a tech house ode to house music that has a memorable catch to it and big label potential. (See reviews below)

In September 2008, Teresa finished a remix of Saviors of Electronica for the Synth DJs which should be released in the fourth quarter. She has a collaboration project with Tony Puccio in current production in addition to a solo original project and an upcoming remix for Kriss Dek, ensuring a steady stream of hot releases over the next 12 months.

"Vibey...its got a vibe! You are settin' the tone of the evening my dear! ... that's deep, its deep, very cool, VERY coooooo!" Vocalist Pepper MaShay

"I definitely hear it being picked up. This will be my eighth year with a residency in Ibiza and I definitely hear this track over in Ibiza and we know that anyone who ever goes there, a lot of hits are made there. It's a very sexy moody track. Women love very much like that and I think it's doing very well for us and so far continues to do so. What I especially like about it though, was the musical hook that you got in there....its almost popcornish you know, really really really cool. It's the kinda thing that when I used to work in a record store, people would come in and try to sing it to me and drive me out of my mind. I am sure that people will go home the next day and find themselves with that popping noise in their head; like, oh my god what WAS that. Very, very, very cool! You succeeded!" Harry Towers, Deet Promotions sexy tracks; women are the first consumers of buying and men usually follow. I definitely see this happening. Keep knocking on doors. Defective would like this because they are so global, because they do a lot of parties all over. They have opened up their sound and I can see them putting this with their catalog." Vocalist Barbara Tucker, B Star Records

"I think it sounds great. Really really really cool. If I were you I would start handing out the track as quickly as possible."

Finding New Patrons

I offer the development of an expanded audience through proactive grass roots/guerilla marketing tactics and web marketing via sites that include but are not limited to: www.djTeresa.net, www.myspace.com, www.facebook.com, www.worlddj.com, www.mindviz.com, www.shejay.com, edmtv, social/event networking, development and submission of press releases.

The growth of house music requires the constant development of new fans. I actively seek out new music fans in the 21 - 40 age group who consume alcohol within a 5 mile radius of the venues I play at via social networking sites online with great success and have roughly 1000 local bay area friends who go out to dance and keep up with my performance schedule. A personal email and guest list invitation have proven more powerful and effective than bulletin board style marketing with this market segment. For a November event at Jackson's, I acquired 100 new friends on myspace.com within a 5 mile radius. Ten accepted the guest list invitation, attended the event and were very grateful that I had let them know such a great venue was in their neighborhood. More than half of my guest list attendees were people who had not previously been to Jackson's.

Many of the highly sought after 30-something patrons with disposable incomes for nice bar tabs have been turned off by the underground side of electronic music. Yet, they still love good dance music in a classy place that makes them groove uncontrollably. They want house music, but they just don't know it yet. Reaching this distant audience takes a bit more effort and creativity, but is an exceptional method of building a solid and consistent audience that is desirable and profitable for the venue.

Goals

- Secure local and regional residencies to include Tampa Bay, Miami and Orlando
- Steady production of remixed and original/collaborative works with first tracks released in 2008
- Secure 2009 Ibiza Residency
- Upgrade home studio, recording equipment and software
- National and international bookings
- Uncover opportunities to speak or teach at trade and industry shows

Commitments to Success

MARCH 25-29, 2008
MIAMI BEACH RESORT & SPA

- Attended Winter Music Conference from March 23 – 31, 2008 as an officially registered delegate for the second year. Submitted original production in the demo listening workshop and earned rave reviews from a panel of powerhouse industry veterans.
- Have accepted booking in Ibiza this summer and plan to scout out residency opportunities for 2009.
- Intend to apply for Spain Work Visa for Summer 2009.
- Currently shopping finished tracks to major record labels and have multiple requests from seasoned producers who want to do remixes for a package release.
- Currently writing and producing additional original tracks and have solid plans to collaborate with three different producers from different labels within the next 5 months on new projects.
- Maintain close watch on global and regional charts and trends. In addition to purchasing new release tracks on a weekly basis through sites such as beatport.com, I receive pre-release tracks from global producers on a regular basis. My case is always fresh, includes tracks no other dj will have and reflects the tastes of the venue patrons.
